In September 2011 the number of confirmed measles cases in the United States surged to an all-time high of almost 30,000, reaching epidemic proportions. The surge in cases is attributed to waning vaccination rates among unvaccinated children and the return of the virus to areas where vaccination was previously unsuccessful. In addition, recent outbreaks have been linked to individuals who are unvaccinated but came in contact with those who were vaccinated. The World Health Organization states that in 2002 measles cases in the United States and Canada, the two countries with the highest number of confirmed cases, were about the same in number as they are today. The WHO lists Germany, Great Britain and the Netherlands as countries with the highest number of confirmed cases in recent years. Since 2001 there have been two major measles outbreaks in the United States; one in 2003 and one in 2004. Have you ever noticed how music and films have similar themes? I never 82157476af
